

1. CARL CRAIG

A MASTER of all trades, a jack of none, Carl Craig is one of dance music's rare breeds with his 20 years spanning techno's most timeless LP masterpieces ("Landcruising"), countless classic singles and an unwitting role in the formative alchemy of drum & bass with Innerzone Orchestra's bass-jittered bass "Bug In the Bassbin" in 1992. For many, though, it is through his remix discography that the Planet E boss has produced his most magical gems. Whether conjuring Inner City's "Ahhonghay" into a multi-layered Detroitian tech-odyssey, adding some synth-glistened sparkle to Telex's seminal electro-pop or reshaping Cesaria Evora's African vocals into a spine-tinglingly minimal tribal builder, Craig's intuitive drive to create something both musically exploratory and genuinely lasting is always imprinted across his works.

Indeed, unlike many early Detroit luminaries, the techno legend continues to inspire and invigorate through his creativity with his remixes finding their way on to a number of last year's best selling mix CDs including Serge Santiago's "We Love..." mix, Sebastian Ingrosso's "Sessions" CD, Ewan Pearson's Fabric mix, Dubfire's faultless Global Underground debut and the Adam Freeland outing that followed it - also on GU. From pioneering work back in the day to still producing amazing, visionary pieces - DJmag salutes Carl Craig as the best remixer of all time. AM
